

The Expert and the Bumblebee - Change

One sunny afternoon, a very important man who knew very important things, watched a busy little bumblebee buzz from one flower to another.

“Hey you, little bee!” called the expert. “You can’t do that!”

“Do what?” asked the bumblebee.

“Fly around from flower to flower,” said the expert.

“Why not?” asked the bumblebee.

“Aerodynamically, it’s impossible!” said the expert.

“Aerodynamically?” asked the bumblebee.

“Yes. Your wings are too small to lift your body into the air. You can not fly. It can not be done!”

“Oh.” said the busy little bumblebee and with that, she circled around the expert’s very important head three times, did one loopy-loop, and buzzed merrily away.